

Questions to Ask Your Doctor About Breast Reconstruction

Here are some common questions people have about breast reconstruction. Take this list with you when you first meet with a breast reconstruction surgeon.

- Am I healthy enough for breast reconstruction?
- Which cancer treatments could affect my options?
- How will my cancer treatments impact the way my rebuilt breast looks or feels?
- What issues about my life, my family or my job could affect my choices?
- How many surgeries can different types of reconstruction take?
- What are the pros and cons of these options? What are the chances of a complication?

- How long does it take most people to recover?
- Could I lose feeling in my rebuilt breast?
- How much scarring could I have? Where will the scars be?
- What care may I need in the future?
- Other questions I have for my doctor: _____

Supported by a grant from:

